The very first Robin Hood visitor centre

Set foot out of the gates of medieval Nottingham and you were immediately in Sherwood Forest. Places like Sherwood and St Anne's, now integral parts of the modern city of Nottingham, were once part of the Royal Forest and came under Forest law.

The area of St Anne's has a special connection with of Robin Hood because it contained the very first 'museum' of Robin Hood artefacts and memorabilia. This museum was housed in the ancient holy well of St Anne's known locally as Robin Hood's Well.
